Balancing Employment with Child and Elder Care: The Implications of Changing Workplaces and Families

PLEASE JOIN US FOR A WEBINAR

Tuesday, December 13
1:00 pm ET

Hear from these experts:

Jennifer Cheeseman Day
U.S. Census Bureau

Nancy Folbre
University of Massachusetts

Douglas Wolf
Syracuse University

In 1960, when only a quarter of married mothers were in the labor force, mothers typically managed the care of their children. Today, with 70 percent of married mothers working, both parents must balance the needs of their children with responsibilities at work. At the same time, our aging population has increased elder care demands on working families.

What do we know about the impact of this balancing act on quality of care and workforce productivity?

In this important webinar, national experts will discuss how the U.S. workforce and family have changed in recent decades and how these changes are affecting the ability of workers to manage career and family care responsibilities.

Questions?
paabriefing@popassoc.org or 202.341.7283

» REGISTER ONLINE NOW